Aperitif

An alcoholic drink served before a meal to stimulate the appetite.

Beer

One of the oldest alcoholic drinks, dating back to around 5,000–10,000 years ago in ancient Mesopotamia. Early beer was made from fermented grains and was an important everyday drink.

Wine

Has been produced for at least 8,000 years, with some of the earliest evidence coming from ancient Georgia and the Middle East. The Greeks and Romans later helped spread winemaking across Europe.

Whiskey

Developed in Ireland and Scotland during the Middle Ages, with early forms appearing around the 12th–15th centuries. It is made by fermenting and distilling grains, then usually aging the spirit in wooden barrels.

Vodka

Originated in Eastern Europe, particularly areas associated with modern-day Russia and Poland, around the 8th–14th centuries. It is traditionally made from grains or potatoes and is known for its relatively neutral flavor.

Gin

Developed from jenever, a Dutch/Belgian spirit, around the 16th–17th centuries. It became especially popular in England, where it evolved into the dry gin styles commonly known today.

Tequila

Originated in Mexico, particularly around the town of Tequila in Jalisco. Its history goes back to the 16th century, when Spanish settlers began distilling fermented agave. Modern tequila is made specifically from blue Weber agave.

Cider

Is an alcoholic drink made by fermenting apple juice. Its history goes back thousands of years, with evidence of fermented apple drinks in ancient Europe. It became particularly popular in Britain, France, and Spain, where apple-growing traditions developed.

Cocktails

Became popular as a distinct category in the 18th and 19th centuries. One of the earliest known definitions appeared in 1806, describing a mixture of spirits, sugar, water, and bitters.

Liqueur

A sweetened and flavored alcoholic drink made with fruits, herbs, spices, nuts, or other ingredients.

Mocktails

Are non-alcoholic mixed drinks designed to look and taste similar to cocktails. They became especially popular in the 20th century, as people wanted sophisticated drinks without alcohol.

Tea

Originated in China, with traditions dating back thousands of years. According to legend, Emperor Shen Nong discovered tea around 2737 BCE. Tea later spread to Japan, the Middle East, and Europe, becoming one of the world's most popular beverages.

Coffee

Is believed to have originated in Ethiopia, with its cultivation and trade developing in Yemen around the 15th century. Coffeehouses then spread across the Middle East and Europe, becoming important social and cultural meeting places.
